

Robust Utility, Truck Demand Fuels Average New-Car Price Increase for June 2018, According to Kelley Blue Book

IRVINE, Calif., July 3, 2018 /PRNewswire/ -- The analysts at Kelley Blue Book today reported the estimated average transaction price for light vehicles in the United States was $35,511 in June 2018. New-vehicle prices increased by $736 (up 2.1 percent) from June 2017, while rising $118 (up 0.3 percent) from last month.

"Helped once again by robust demand for SUVs and trucks, average transaction prices were up a solid 2 percent in June 2018," said Tim Fleming, analyst for Kelley Blue Book. "The mix of light trucks is estimated to be at 69 percent, up from 64 percent just one year ago. Last month was particularly strong for pickup trucks, as full-size truck prices rose 5 percent on new models and richer trim mixes. The underlying strength of trucks is best represented by the mid-size truck segment, which despite no new products, saw prices climb 3 percent."

Despite strength among SUVs and trucks, Toyota Motor Company increased its transaction prices nearly 3 percent, thanks to its cars. Toyota was helped most by the redesigned Camry, which was up 9 percent, and the redesigned Avalon also posted strong numbers, up 7 percent. The Lexus brand increased more than 3 percent, as the redesigned LS sedan continued to show the most improvement, up 14 percent.

Hyundai-Kia prices were slightly down in June 2018, although the Kia brand did rise nearly 1 percent. Kia was helped by the new Stinger model, as well as the Niro, whose plug-in hybrid variant pushed prices up 2 percent. For Hyundai, both the Elantra and Sonata were down, and the new Kona crossover brought down average transaction prices due to its low starting price. The Genesis brand was up 3 percent, largely due to the G80's new 3.3 Turbo Sport trim.
