

Average New-Car Prices Rise 2 Percent in February 2018, According to Kelley Blue Book; Buyers Still Willing to Pay Top Dollar for the Latest Models

IRVINE, Calif., March 1, 2018 /PRNewswire/ -- The analysts at Kelley Blue Book today reported the estimated average transaction price (ATP) for light vehicles in the United States was $35,444 in February 2018. New-vehicle prices have increased by $722 (up 2.1 percent) from February 2017, while dropping $96 (down 0.3 percent) from last month.

"It was another month of solid transaction prices in February 2018, with 2 percent growth year-over-year," said Tim Fleming, analyst for Kelley Blue Book. "Even with new-vehicle demand expected to continue to slow in 2018, average transaction prices have been unaffected, though incentives have risen similarly to offset part of the extra cost. The numbers indicate that new-car buyers are still willing to pay top dollar for the latest models with the most current features and technology. Even the new Honda Accord and Toyota Camry are commanding large premiums over their predecessors, despite competing in a rapidly shrinking segment."
