Two of the most trusted brands in automotive content and data have come together to bring their respective audiences important automotive information through Kelley Blue Book's <http://www.kbb.com/>, and Car and Driver's Web site <http://www.caranddriver.com/>.

As of this month, consumers can find the most accurate and timely new vehicle pricing from Kelley Blue Book directly on caranddriver.com. Additionally, kbb.com's visitors can now read Car and Driver's professional road test reviews each month and 'User Road Tests' of vehicles from the drivers visiting both sites.

"Car and Driver chose Kelley Blue Book, not only because it offered the most credible and accurate new car pricing, but because the information is easy to integrate," said Stephen Henson, vice president of marketing and business development, Kelley Blue Book. "Kelley Blue Book can provide customized new or used pricing for any site, in a matter of days."

The new content agreement provides automakers the opportunity to reach elusive in-market car-buyers at a critical stage in their vehicle shopping process through these two sites. Car and Driver's reviews are sought out in the early stages when buyers are determining which vehicles to consider and Kelley Blue Book provides the comprehensive pricing shoppers are seeking at the end of the buying process.

"By joining forces -- Car and Driver and Kelley Blue Book are reinforcing their leadership in the critical areas of new vehicle pricing and content which are of the utmost importance to auto enthusiasts and in-market buyers," said Zvia Herrmann, vice president, Auto Group, Hachette Filipacchi Media U.S.

As part of the agreement, Kelley Blue Book's new and used car pricing will appear on Hachette's other automotive Web site Road & Track, www.roadandtrack.com later this summer.

Charlie Vogelheim, executive editor and 17-year veteran of Kelley Blue Book also joins Car and Driver Radio host Alan Taylor as a bi-weekly guest host, discussing topics important to car enthusiasts and car-buyers. Currently the show airs in Los Angeles with future syndication planned for summer 2003.
